JG 73 'Steinhoff', Luftwaffe, Rostock-Laage Air Base, June 2009

NATO Dark Grey finish overall, with Light Grey radome. Air intake lips, the fin top and the wing, canard and the fin leading edges are Flint Grey.

Right, to mark the 50th anniversary of the Fighter Wing 73 and five years of flying the Eurofighter, this two-seat machine was specially decorated with a portrait of the unit namesake Gen. Steinhoff. It is the sole German training aeroplane built within Block 2 by EADS at Manching, flying for the first time in November 2005. The Luftwaffe will receive a total of 33 two-seat and 147 single-seat Eurofighters. Worthy of note in this photo is the large one-piece canopy. (Marcus Fülber)

Left, a 1,000 litre (220-gal) drop tank, cleared for supersonic flight, can be carried under the central fuselage pylon; note its three stabilising fins. Also visible in this view is the lower fuselage "shoulder" recess, fitted with two downward extending missile crutches, for the AIM-120 AMRAAM (Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile), the Typhoon's primary weapon for beyond-visual-range air-to-air combat.

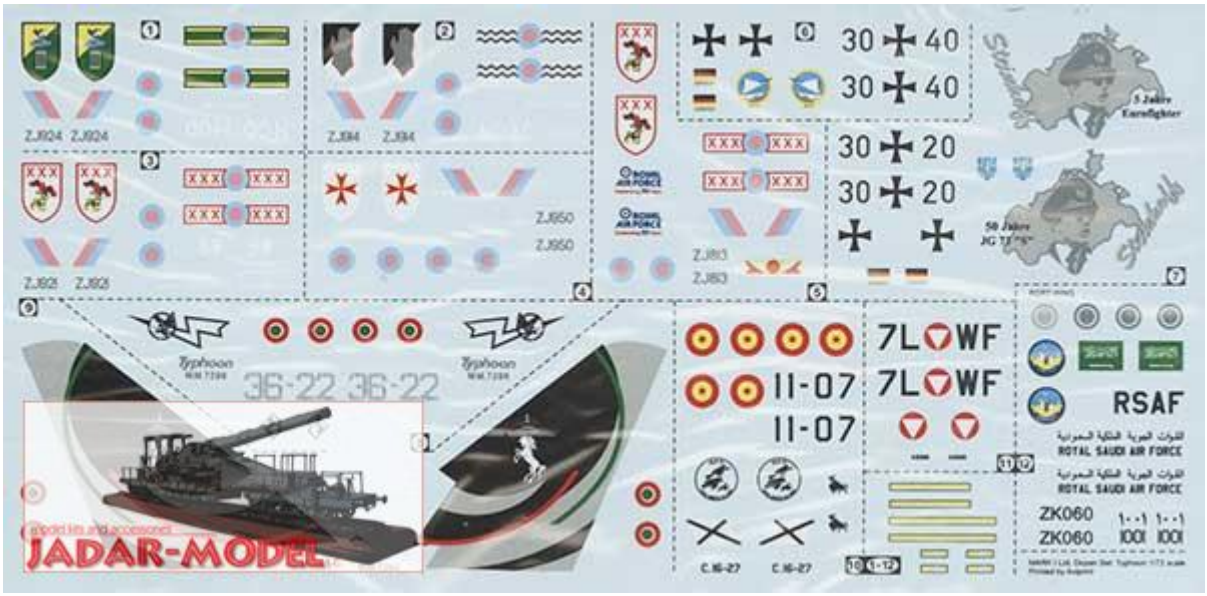

Right, the rear cockpit of the two-seater is designated for the instructor. Details of the lightweight Martin-Baker Mk.16A 'zero-zero' ejection seat, complete with a seatback cushion and harness, can be observed to good advantage here. (Marcus Fülber)
